ficiaries of sixty-one deceased employees and yearly to the popularity of the group insur-

A New Heavyweight Champion.
Max Schmeling is the new heavyweight champion of the world. The title surrendered by Tunney went to him when he was awarded last night's fight with Jack Sharkey on a foul, Sharkey having sent a heavy left below the German's belt a second or two before the bell rang for the end of the fourth round.

While American admirers of the retiring game will regret the passing of the championship from the United States or a foul; while Schmeling himself no doubt will appreciate the title far less as the result of the way of its attainment, there can be no question of the justice of the referee's decision, for there is very general agreement that the blow which told the winner out was too low.

Without regard to the comparative merit of the showings made by the two contenders, all accounts of the fight, both those in print and those which came over the air, are in accord in holding that it was not one which might have been expected from men of real championship caliber, or one which will in any way help the pugilistic game, which in recent years has been so outrageously commercialized. And what is said in disparagement of the two fighters may be said as well of the ring officials, all of whom apparently lost their heads when the end came so unexpectedly.

It was a case of blundering which will recall the manner in which Dempsey was permitted to go on after he had been helped back into the ring following his fight over the ropes inaugurated by Firpo and the famed "fourteen-second" count which kept the same Dempsey from regaining the laurels which had been saved to him by the failure of the referee to award them to the big Argentinian who was rightfully entitled to them.

In the light of the Dempsey-Firpo incident, it is well for the reputation of American sportsmanship that the referee did a hard night's fight to the foreigner, even though he delayed unduly long in so doing, and that the award was generally accepted by the $0,000 spectators present at the fight and the press and the public as a whole as a fair one.

Mechanical Detectives.

An interesting story of mechanical "delecting" which resulted in the seizure of a radio broadcasting plant and its two operators comes from Brooklyn.

Early in May a radio operator of the coast guard picked up some signals which manifestly were in code. Not being able to account for them through any legally regular channels, he suspected that they were being used by rum-runners as a means of communicating between the land and rum craft cut at sea, and reported the matter to his superiors.

The chief radioman of the guard, the assistant radio supervisor and the assistant radio inspector at once started out with a newly-devised apparatus for use in locating unlicensed stations, and continued their search till its successful end Tuesday night, the device having narrowed down the hundreds of square miles to be covered to the very small area on which the plant was located.

The device used is described in dispatches as a special short-wave receiver with a rotating loop to pick up the broadcast signals. It is small and can be carried by automobile through the territory thought to house the sending apparatus. When the loop is turned to a position parallel with the direction of wave travel, the received signal is loudest.
Conversely, when the loop is rotated to a position about at right angles to the angle of the strongest signal, the device picks up the least amount of radio energy from the broadcaster and the signal is weakest. The directions on the weak signals are then put on charts.

The coast guard searchers went through the operation from various spots in and around Brooklyn, placing their findings by way of thin straight lines drawn over the map of the borough. Where the lines crossed one another was the place they wanted.
When they got near the suspected position they brought another device—one that measures the strength of the waves—into play.
This deposited them neatly in front of a supposedly-empty house, in which they found the broadcasting set and one of its operators. and shortly thereafter the second operator walked in to do the "night trick." The two operators were taken before a United States commissioner and are held under bonds of $7,500 each.

The criminal world may feel human factors in its trail, but there is no fooling the mechanical policeman in cases such as this.
It will run down its quarry, if a broadcasting plant may be called that, every time. Criminals and crooks will probably keep the Brooklyn exploit in mind, and it might be well if amateur over the country who break in and spoil programs did the same. There is at least one here in Marion who seriously offends in this way, who might very profitably "watch his step," as the saying goes.

Of the $500,000 worth of gems and jewelry found in the safe deposit box of $33 has been identified, and Nelson's bail

The next report will probably be that the identification of the bracelet was an error.

Senator Brookhart is seeking to prevent a

The 100-year-old estate of the Duke of imposed in England, but give our tax-cutters time and they will probably have as much the same position as that of British landowners today.

It was but recently that the story of the

An electrical device has been perfected to is possible of attainment by the human eye.

What a lot of time, trouble and annoyance

ANOTHER ENDURANCE TEST.

Editorial Opinion.

THE PRESIDENT IS RIGHT.

It is not at all easy to be impressed by the insistence of Senator Borah that the foreign relations committee of the upper house must have access to all the private and informal diplomatic correspondence in the state department archives which deal with the London conference treaty.
Nor is there any excuse for the tone Mr. Borah adopts toward President Hoover because the latter declines to bow to his imperious request, or declines to let the senator in on the secret of the president's position of the executive department perfectly clear when he said:

"These requests call for the production and possible publication of informal and confidential conversations, communications and tentative suggestions of a kind which are common to almost every negotiation, and without which such negotiations can not successfully be carried on. If the confidence in which they were made to the American delegation in London is broken, it would materially impair the possibility of future successful negotiations between this government and other nations."

This, with an assurance which Mr. Borah ought not to have needed after having once read the federal constitution, that confidential papers do not cover up any secret understanding, should be sufficient for the senator, and probably would be, if he were less obsessed with a sense of his importance as the only great statesman.

It would be bad taste, bad diplomacy and a breach of faith to publish to the world confidential communications made in private to diplomatic representatives of America by diplomatic representatives of other countries; and in the present condition of the senate, the president and secretary of state are quite justified in feeling doubtful about the discretion that body would use in case it should get access to such papers. Besides that, the London treaty speaks for itself. A study of the text should be sufficient to show whether it is good or bad.—Detroit Free Press.

THE BURDEN OF SICKNESS.

A doctor, who is vice president of one of the old-line insurance companies, in an address in New York City discussed the cost of sickness, and brought out some facts that will turn public attention further to the subject. The insurance company, in cooperation with a national committee on the cost of medical care, made a study of 3,000 families of working people who had been asked to keep records for six months of their expenditure for medical care. The average amount spent was $70, or nearly $2.50 a week. Forty per cent of the families spent less than $25 in the six months, while one per cent spent more than $500, making the cost of illness a heavy burden.

The doctor suggested that sickness must be treated as one of the hazards of life, and he asked whether its cost should not be provided against by insurance. Under such a plan expenses would be distributed among all the families in the insured group, instead of being borne by one family. The plan suggested goes beyond that of sick benefits now provided for by fraternal and other organizations, and it would place sickness insurance on the same basis as life insurance, though it would involve more than is found in tables of life expectancy. There would be the cost of hospital and medical service and probably salaries of doctors, now a matter debated in medical societies not to mention the loss of time that is a large part of the cost of sickness. The cost can be easily figured, but there's the uncertainty as to time and duration to be taken into account in devising any system of insurance. Providing for adequately paid care and medical service to relieve families of moderate incomes of what may often be a crushing burden makes a problem that is sure to force itself on public attention.—Youngstown Vindicator.

"Epistaxis"—Nature's Safety Valve.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

"Epistaxis" is another name for nose-bleed.
Nature shows her great curative powers in every child who has nose-bleed. She merely opens a safety valve to prevent mischief.

The fluid which is lost is almost instantaneously replaced by the body, which draws water from the tissues. Thus it is that persons who have suffered greatly from nose-bleeds have severe thirst.
The water must be replaced in the tissues without delay.

Some persons are particularly susceptible to nose-bleeds. In some families there seems to be a hereditary tendency to recurrent attacks. It might come on at any time of day or night. They may be awakened from sleep with a bad bleeding from the nose. It is, however, never a serious condition.

Nasal catarrh is a very common cause of nose bleed. Anaemic children and growing children are especially susceptible to it.

Epistaxis is sometimes mistaken for a hemorrhage from the lungs or stomach when the bleeding occurs in the sleep and some of the blood is swallowed. In such a case it is quite natural that the blood should be vomited the next morning.
The experience is apt to cause some alarm, especially if the patient is nervous or easily frightened.

Usually the bleeding stops of its own accord.
If it should persist there are simple methods which are nearly always successful. One is the application of cold water or ice to the nose and back of the neck. If this does not check it try sucking up the nose a very small amount of pulverized alum or tannic acid.

Rest is essential. Have the patient lie down or recline in an easy chair with the head thrown back.

In rare cases it is necessary to have the nose plugged in order to stop the bleeding. Your doctor should be consulted in the matter.

When there is an ulcer in the nose it may be necessary to have the ulcerated spot touched with a caustic, but your doctor should do this. Whenever there is recurrent nose bleeding a doctor should be consulted. He may save you much annoyance and suffering.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES.

E. S. Q.—My ears protrude. How can this be remedied?

A—How can freckles be removed?

A—Consult a plastic surgeon for examination and advice.

T.—Try using equal parts of lemon juice and peroxide as a bleach. If the preparation is too drying apply a good cold cream after each application.

MRS. K. Q.—My three-year-old daughter has quite a noticeable furr on her face. What would you advise?

A—I would advise leaving it alone, especially in view of the child's age. It will probably disappear as the child grows older.

L. J. K. Q.—What causes headache?

A—The common causes are eye-strain, infected teeth, tonsils and sinuses, constipation, indigestion, auto-intoxication, high blood pressure, kidney conditions or catarrh. An examination will determine the exact cause and then treatment can be prescribed.—Copyright, 1930. Newspaper Feature

Sun, Earth and Stars.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

Through the patient observation and elaborate calculations of astronomers and astrophysicists, it is now possible to describe some of the fundamental phenomena of the universe in reasonably exact terms. It helps us enormously to understand the great problems of the universe if we can set down in absolute and relative proportions of things.
For example, we are able to understand how big the sun is, once we know that its diameter is more than 100 times the diameter of the earth. It would take an express train about twelve years to travel once round its surface—presuming that the railroad track was laid and the sun was of the temperature of the earth. But the sun is of a different temperatures, or density to that of the earth.

The sun is only about one-fourth as dense as the earth. Its mass is light, then, as compared to ours. And yet, in spite of that, its weight in kilograms is measured by the numbers, two, followed by thirty ciphers! In tons, this would be about two thousand million million million million tons.

The sun on account of its enormous mass, attracts bodies very much more strongly than does the earth. For example, the sun endows bodies on its own surface with twenty-eight times the weight which the earth can give to similar objects on its own surface. A man weighing 150 pounds on the surface of the earth would therefore weigh about two tons on the surface of the sun.

One of the most powerful instruments for determining the velocity of heavenly bodies is the spectroscopic. The science of spectroscopy, which has been developed in less than three quarters of a century, teaches us, among others, two important things:

1. To every element belongs a certain definite lines in the spectrum, which occur always in exactly the same positions, and to precisely the same order in the spectrum as bright lines, then we know for certain that the chemical element in question exists in the source of light under investigation in the form of incandescent vapor.

2. If these lines appear dark, while the background of the spectrum shows its rainbow colors—as happens, for example, in the spectrum of the surface of the sun—this indicates, as laboratory experiments have proved, that a luminous body is transmitting its rays through the vapor of this element; which, if it were shining above, would give as precisely the same lines, but bright on a dark background.

Most remarkable of all of the results of spectroscopy, perhaps, is the fact that it furnishes us information concerning the movements of heavenly bodies. The principle upon which this fact rests is known, from the name of its discoverer, as Doppler's principle.
This is described by Thomson in "Heaven and Earth."

Suppose, for example, we see a yellow star. The light from such a star, known as monochromatic light, makes 550 oscillations per second. Imagine that this star approaches us with an incredible rapidity. We shall now receive a greater number of oscillations—say, 600 trillion per second. As a result, the star, which formerly appeared yellow, now looks green. Conversely, if the yellow star moved away from us it would eventually look orange.

In this way we may determine the movements of stars, and even determine the rate of speeds at which they are moving, or their radial velocities.—Copyright, 1930. Inter-

The Stars Say--

For Friday, June 15

ACCORDING to the astrologers, this day may well be in line to deserve its opprobrious reputation, as there are several signs of disruption and uneasiness in those angles relating to business and ordinary affairs. Fortunately, larger enterprises and purely personal associations and activities are under excellent way for expansion advancement and personal gratification. Social, domestic and particularly affectional affiliations are under a very happy sign of prosperity and happiness.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for some sort of opposition or sudden disruption to business plans, or there may be a sudden change of work or environment, but other matters should thrive and bring much personal gratification. Romantic affairs should react to great happiness and success. A child born on this day should be excellently endowed to overcome many sudden calamities in life, despite castles and nervous tendencies, eventually rising to high position and much personal happiness.

Cow Claims Discovery Of New York Caverns

HOWE CAVERNS. N. Y. June 12.—A dock of bats may have revealed Carlsbad Cave, New Mexico, to the world. But Howe Caverns, 40 miles west of Albany, were discovered by a cow.

This comparison has cropped up in the discussion of old times of the cavern country, who don't intend to have a cave in New Mexico claim all honors in the matter of quaint antiquarian lore.

The series of caverns which burrow for tortuous fantastic miles deep in a hillside between the Catskill highlands and the Mohawk Valley, were known to the Indians, as the story goes, as Onondaga or Cave of Great Galleries.

In 1852 Lester Howe, a farmer of the neighborhood, discovered the entrance, in the "blowing rock," a hill from the side of which flowed a mysterious current of cold air. Howe made his discovery after noticing the permeance with which his cow, Milbrey, wandered off on silvery afternoons to the shade of a clump of trees at the base of the "blowing rock." He was the first white man to enter the caverns which now bear his name.

The cave in New Mexico was discovered by a white man in 1901. Jim White, a cowboy, saw a hole in the ground, a volcano, as he thought, toward it the volcano turned out to be a cloud of bats issuing from the mouth of a cave.

Early explorers of the Carlsbad cave were overpowered by a basket of bats. When an overhang of the cave on the windward side the bats added monetary drops to the bucket, a nothing to the tourists' enjoyment of the sensation by calling it a mere drop in the bucket. Howe Caverns is the first subterranean wonder to be equipped with electric lights, which lower visitors 170 feet through a concrete shaft to the lowest "vestibule."

Prussian Excavations

Reveal Ancient Graves

KOENIGSBERG, Germany.—The excavations that have been going on at different parts of East Prussia for a year or more have now brought to light 25 graves dating from the stone age about 5000 years ago.

The remains lie in richly ornamented stone coffins, and many stone axes have been found at depths indicating the probability that many other graves from the same period will still be found.

At Westphalen, near Sinsberg, a burial place dating from the days of the Roman Empire was discovered. The bones were cremated and the ashes buried in covered urns.

Near the small town of Lüneburg a prehistoric settlement has been discovered, dating from the early Iron Age, 500 to 600 B. C.

SOUP IS STANDBY FOR CAMPING USE

Indispensable as Coffee and Is Sure Antidote Against Chilly Air.

Soup is as indispensable as coffee on a camping trip. When the pleasant day breezes turn quickly to a sharp evening chill—for that quick meal in a drizzle—soup is a grand standby. It soothes and stimulates and, what's more important to the camper, can be prepared in double-quick time.

What kind of soups shall be taken depends on the length of the trip and what consequences are to be used. If it's mostly travel by motor or canoe and weight isn't much object, then the canned soups will do. All you need is a saucepan and a can-opener, and if it's a thick soup, some water.

But if it's a real hiking trip, with plenty of walking and the weight of the duffle-bag must be kept down, then the evaporated soups are more practical. They may be the powder variety—and these are very light weight. The come in all varieties of meat and vegetables, and a six-inch tube of powdered soup will dilute to six quarts of soup.

Powdered soups, like most of the canned soups, may be nourishing as well as stimulating. Pea, bean, potato and starch vegetable or bean soups contain definite food value and, at a pinch may be a light meal.

On the other hand, the bouillions are stimulating and pleasant but can't be regarded as food. They are excellent at the beginning of a meal. Also, there is now on the market a tube of concentrated soup jelly.

Cheap Bread Cheats with an Ancient Lure

EVERYBODY laughs at the farmer who goes to the city and buys a skyscraper for a thousand dollars.

Yet he is answering the same ancient lure that tempts the buyer of cheap bread—the lure of "something for nothing."

We all know, when we stop to think, that there is no such thing in business today. Every one pays for what he gets and gets no more than he pays for.

If you buy for less today you were cheated yesterday. True bargains are as mythical as Santa Claus.

Women who think before they buy, serve Holsum for true economy, for full-value nourishment.

Hundreds are changing to Holsum. Thousands have changed to Holsum. Have you?

READ THE WANT ADS

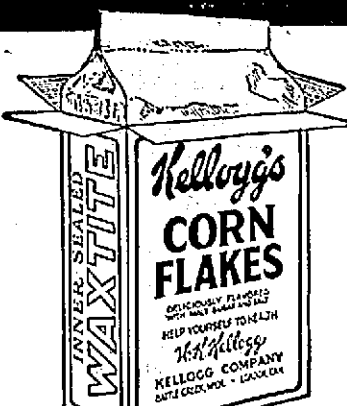

TO MOTHERS

WHEN the children begin to tire of the usual glass of milk, the usual egg, it's a sure sign they need variety. Brighten up the nursery supper by serving a bowl of Kellogg's Corn Flakes with milk or cream and honey or fruit.

They'll take plenty of milk and like it. They'll sleep better—feel better. For Kellogg's are extra easy to digest. A healthful bed-time treat for children.

Kellogg's

CORN FLAKES

Leading dietitians stress the importance of variety in children's menus. They praise the practice of serving a crisp, ready-to-eat cereal at the evening meal.

What better cereal than Kellogg's Corn Flakes? The world's most popular! Children love these flakes of toasted corn with the flavor that can't be copied.

Delicious for breakfast, lunch and supper. Always oven-fresh in the inner sealed waxtite wrapper. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.
